Commenting on the quarter, CFO of Optibase, Amir Philips, said, "During the third quarter, we saw a continuing increase in revenues from last quarter while operating expenses were kept at the same level, showing a significant decrease of $559,000 in our operating loss compared to last quarter, and a decrease in total net loss. Other expenses in the quarter, totaling $499,000 are related to our investment in Scopus. We attribute much of the revenues growth to our increased sales efforts in the United States, concentrating on the enterprise market and the military segment in particular, while maintaining our strong presence in the Asian Pacific markets."

We are in the process of evaluating our options in light of Scopus' recent unilateral steps and the recent global developments. We are also taking the necessary steps to see that the current global recession will have a minimal affect on our business and that we will go safely through this period while maintaining our technological edge and strong presence in the markets we address and serve."

He concluded by saying, "Though we believe that Optibase is well on track, we are considering our strategic plan and our options in light of recent changes in the world's economy and the global recession. Our goal is to continue providing great innovative products while maintaining a high rate of customer satisfaction and loyalty."
